

Young Authors Conference Excellence Awards

Tri-County ESC and Buckeye Book Fair are excited to announce a new component to the Young Authors Conference. New for this coming year, we will be asking each school to identify 1 Excellence Award Winner. This award will go to 1 student in each school that shows determination, ability, and a passion for writing.

Each school will have the flexibility to select a winner of the excellence award how they deem fit. However, to help support this process we have included a rubric that could be used to score and rank student work to be evaluated. Deadline for submission is October 1st, 2025

Tri-County ESC and Buckeye Book Fair are asking each school to select 1 winner to submit to the submission portal linked below. We will ask for the student's name, grade, hoodie size, and a work sample if possible for us to display on the day of the Young Authors' Conference.

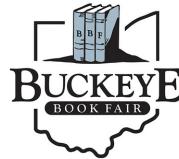

Buckeye Book Fair and Tri-County ESC work to provide an educational and fun event for students and teachers at the 2025 Young Authors' Conference. We strive to increase access to enriching experiences within the world of literature and the arts. We hope this added award gives students excitement and builds anticipation for our November event.

Important Details:

- Your school will only provide 1 winner to the submission portal.
- Schools have flexibility in selecting their excellence award winner.
- Deadline to submit your school award winner is October 1st, 2025.
- Student must be a 3rd-8th grader

SUMMARY

A modern-day response to The Giving Tree, this lyrical picturebook shows how a family passes down love from generation to generation, leaving a legacy of growing both trees and community.

Once there was a wide-open field, and a boy who loved his grandmother, who loved him back.

The boy's grandmother gives him many gifts, like hugs, and Sunday morning pancakes, and acorns with wild and woolly caps. And all her wisdom about how things grow. As the boy becomes a father, he gives his daughter bedtime stories his grandmother told him, and piggyback rides. He gives her acorns, and the wisdom he learned about how things grow. His daughter continues the chain, then passing down gifts of her own. Here is a picture book about the legacy of love that comes when we nurture living things—be they people or trees.

BOOK TITLE: The River that Wolves Moved

AUTHOR: Mary Kay Carson

SUMMARY

Long before its establishment as a national park in 1872, Yellowstone was home to the gray wolf, as well as other large predators. But the relationship between human and wolf has always been a tense and complicated one.

Predator control programs were developed and, by the mid-1900s, wolves had almost been entirely eliminated from the region and even the lower United States. The removal of even one strand of an ecosystem's complex web can have a ripple effect, though. Using the structure of "The House that Jack Built," science writer Mary Kay Carson shows the interconnectedness of the wildlife that lives in a place and how the presence (or absence) of a single species can impact an ecosystem so that the physical landscape itself is altered. Engaging text and colorful detailed artwork make the natural science understandable and accessible to young readers. With so many of Earth's ecosystems under threat by climate change, pollution, and loss of habitat, this is a critical and timely topic. Back matter includes information on the Yellowstone region during the wolves' absence and after their reintroduction.

BOOK TITLE: The Cloud Factory

AUTHOR: Paul Stutzman

ILLUSTRATOR: Wendy Leach

SUMMARY

For generations, whimsical clouds in every- changing skies have fired the imagination of children and adults. Let the creativity of your child flow as they find stories and characters in the scenes above their heads.

Lying in the grass and watching the changing shapes of clouds above her, young Meg wonders where clouds come from. Grandpa tells a whimsical story about the factory and the children who work there to make clouds. Beyond the fantasy, there is a teachable lesson -- children taking responsibility for their actions and working together to accomplish a task. Delightful illustrations for the younger set, easy enough for early readers. Ages 3 - 8.
