WOOSTER, OH — The Buckeye Book Fair returns on Saturday, November 7, bringing an electric lineup of nationally recognized authors and illustrators to Wooster. With 3 New York Times bestselling authors, 5 USA Today bestselling authors, and dozens of award-winning storytellers, the Fair remains one of Ohio’s most anticipated literary events.

This year’s featured guests include New York Times bestselling authors Amanda Flower, Shelley Shepard Gray, and Thrity Umrigar, alongside USA Today bestselling favorites Anne Blackburne, Olivia Matthews, and Alex Erickson. The roster also highlights major national award winners such as Mindy McGinnis (Edgar Award), Jessica Strawser, and Andrew Welsh-Huggins, plus nationally acclaimed children’s creators including Lindsay Ward, Aya Khalil, Keila V. Dawson, Lindsay Bonilla, and Marcy Campbell.

“This year’s lineup is exceptional, and we know that connecting readers with books can change lives. We’re excited to bring together authors and readers for a day of discovery, conversation, and community.” said Kimberly Crislip Jarvis, Executive Director of the Buckeye Book Fair. “The Fair is more than an event — it’s a homecoming for readers, families, and the entire literary community.”

With more than 100 authors representing every major genre, hands-on activities, and books for all ages, the Buckeye Book Fair continues its 39-year tradition of celebrating Ohio’s vibrant literary culture.
